U.S. OWNED SHIP BLOWN UP

DIXIANA SUNK OFF FRANCE

HAVRE, France, May 31.—The steamer Dixiana, formerly the Putney Bridge, which sailed from Savannah, Ga., for Havre, has been sunk by a German submarine. Though owned by the Strachan Shipping Company of Savannah, she flew the British flag and was chartered by a British company.

The Dixiana sailed from Savannah May 11. The twenty-seven members of her crew were able to get into their boats and were picked up by a Greek steamer and landed at Barry, Wales.

They said the vessel was torpedoed without warning.

Two of the men were suffering from injuries sustained by debris falling into a lifeboat. They declared that the Dixiana was fired upon by the Germans, who found this method of sinking the ship too slow, so they fired a torpedo into the engine room.

The vessel was attacked off Ushant, on the French coast. German submarines have been particularly active in that region during the past few days.

The Dixiana is operated by the Furness line. She carried a cargo of cotton from Brunswick and Savannah.

The vessel's name was changed recently when she was taken over by her present owners. As the Putney Bridge she was managed by M. H. Horsley.

She was a vessel of 3,329 tons burden, 331 feet long, 47 feet wide and 24 feet deep. She hailed from London and was built at West Hartlepool in 1901.

ASK WILSON TO AID FRANK

BOSTON PLEA FOR LEO FRANK

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Wilson today was requested to use his good offices to have Leo M. Frank's death sentence commuted to life imprisonment. The request came from Rabbi Silverman, representing the Independent Order of Israel of Boston. President Wilson has not so far indicated what action, if any, he will take.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 31.—The appeal for clemency in the case of Leo M. Frank, who is under sentence of death June 22 for the murder of sixteen-year-old Mary Phagan, was begun today before the Georgia Prison Commission by former Congressman W. M. Howard and associates.

The hearing is expected to occupy three days, during which the evidence given at the trial, the public state of mind at the time of the trial and the progress of the case up to the present will be closely reviewed in argument. At the end of the oral pleas the documents will be left in the hands of the commission whom it is expected will occupy a week or ten days considering the merits of the case. The commission consists of three members, Robert E. Davison, E. S. Rainey and T. E. Patterson.

Their findings will be reported in a recommendation to Governor John M. Slaton, who will render his decision to commute or not to interfere with the sentence of the court.

LIFE SENTENCE ONLY HOPE.

Mary Phagan, for whose murder Frank was sentenced to die, was killed two years ago on Memorial Day. Since that time the prisoner has conducted a fight for liberty extending through every State court, through the Federal courts and twice to the United States Supreme Court. Now all chance of immediate freedom is gone and only the hope of a life sentence is left.

Georgia lawyers and judges, including the ablest in the State, have written to Governor Slaton and the prison board urging clemency and declaring either their doubt of his guilt or their confidence in his innocence.

Many of these have been the strongest in their opposition to clemency, but now that the Georgia courts have been upheld they have gone on record for commutation. Solicitor-General Hugh Dorsey, the mother of Mary Phagan and several delegations, however, are opposed to leniency being shown the prisoner.

WILL PLEAD FOR PRISONER.

Frank's friends place much dependence on the affidavit which it is said Judge L. S. Roan, who tried Frank, made before his death and in a letter which it is said he wrote to the Governor and prison board expressing his personal doubt and urging commutation. Opponents of Frank have asserted there is no such letter. It is understood, however, that Frank's lawyers will produce one.

In addition to the Roan statements William M. Smith, attorney for Jim Conley, will make a statement asserting his belief in the prisoner's innocence and Conley's guilt; prominent Atlantans and delegations from Chicago, Savannah, Columbus, Ga., Macon, Dalton and other points in and outside the State will plead for the prisoner and all the written records of various court trials will be introduced.

HUGHES PITCHES MORNING TUSSLE

FENWAY PARK, May 31.—The Braves won a close and exciting morning game from the Phillies, 2 to 1. Hughes was very effective with men on bases and should not have been scored on at all, a fumble by the Rabbit, which should have been the third out, letting in a run in the first inning.

Three-baggers helped the Braves to score their two runs. Fitz's triple in the third was followed by Connolly's single, and Schmidt's triple in the fourth was turned into a run by Maranville's sacrifice fly.

Chalmers pitched good ball otherwise. Connolly made two star catches in left field. The batting feature was contributed by Fitzpatrick with two singles and a three-bagger.

A large morning crowd saw the fun and the weather was perfect.

MORNING GAME.

FIRST INNING

Phillies—Bancroft singled to right and stole second. Byrne walked. Niehoff fanned. Cravath hoisted to Maranville. Becker walked, filling the bases. Maranville fumbled Luderus' grounder, Bancroft scoring and the others moving up. Paskert [illegible]. ONE RUN.

Braves—Moran's hard rap glanced off Chalmers' pitching hand and Bancroft threw the runner out at first, the decision being very close. Fitz singled to centre. Connolly hit to Luderus, who threw to Bancroft forcing Fitz, and Bancroft shot the ball back to Luderus in time to double up Joe at first. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING

Phillies—Killifer hoisted to Magee. Chalmers singled to centre. He tried to steal as Bancroft fanned, but was doubled, Whaling to Maranville. NO RUNS.

Braves—Magee beat out a slow tap to Byrne. Schmidt sacrificed, Chalmers to Luderus. Smith walked. Maranville sent up a high foul that Killifer got close to the grandstand. Whaling flied to Becker. NO RUNS.

GARDNER BACK IN RED SOX LINEUP

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—The badly crippled Athletics were beaten by the Boston Red Sox this morning before a fair-sized crowd, 2 to 1, in a duel between Pitchers Bush and Foster. Foster triumphed because his support on the bases was better than that accorded Bush.

A play by Jimmy Walsh in the eighth, when he over-ran second base, was the main cause of the Athletics' downfall.

Thompson batted for Bush and singled and then Murphy flied out. Walsh got on first via the base on

CABINET TO TAKE UP GRAVE ISSUE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Wilson will reply promptly and decisively to the German note, and will sustain the position taken in the Lusitania note, it was learned in official circles today.

There are two courses open to the President, according to one official of the State Department. One is to support the original American stand without reservation, and the other to take a course which will entail prolonged controversy. It was predicted the President would take the former course.

It was first reported in official circles that the President might take several days in framing his reply.

The note reached the State Department at midnight and the work of uncoding began early today for immediate presentation to the President. The work of uncoding the note was completed shortly after 10 a. m.

It was learned that the text cabled to the press from Berlin was substantially correct, except in the matter of the charge made by the German Foreign Office that the Lusitania was known to have carried mounted guns below her decks.

The official text stated that the German government was informed that the Lusitania "undoubtedly" carried these guns. The

The American The Only Paper Gaining In Advertising Over Last Year

During the four weeks beginning with May 2, and ending with May 29, the American was the only paper of those publishing Sunday editions to show a gain in advertising over the same days of last year. The other three papers all lost.

During the month of April the American was the only one of the four papers gaining in advertising. The others all lost.

The gain of the American in May was greater than in April. The losses of the other three papers were greater in May than in April.

The great home-going circulation of the Boston American, the largest evening circulation and the largest Sunday circulation in Boston, produces maximum results for advertisers. The Boston American, both evening and Sunday, reaches in their homes exactly the people to whom every merchant wants to appeal.

GERMANY JUSTIFIES SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA

JAGOW ASKS FURTHER PARLEY WITH THE U. S.

By FREDERICK WERNER,

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, May 31.—That the German government in its diplomatic negotiations with the United States over submarine warfare and the destruction of the Lusitania, is looking into the future and expects to establish a foundation for the readjustment of the international rules of war, was the expression of opinion current in official circles today.

Although not expressed in concrete form by the Foreign Office, the German government is ready to contend that the introduction of the submarine and aeroplane in warfare and the action of England in trying to crush this nation by economic pressure must all be considered in a new light. They cannot be regulated, according to the German view, by the laws of the past, which were not in force before the present-day methods of warfare.

The fact that the German reply to President Wilson's note would not be whole-heartedly received in the United States was discounted here. But Foreign Minister von Jagow and his advisers believe that Germany is entirely justified in attempting to "establish a basis of fact" relative to the exact character of the Lusitania before proceeding into the final stages of the negotiations.

If the line adopted by the German Foreign Office is followed it would require the exchange of several notes before a final decision is reached, and in the meantime Germany's submarine warfare against hostile shipping would continue.

GROUNDWORK FOR NEGOTIATIONS

Germany is proceeding upon the principle involved in the questions at stake. The Foreign Office does not want to establish any precedents to which the War Office and Admiralty will have to adhere during the balance of the war, for the position of the German empire is too critical now for that.

Dr. Von Jagow takes the stand that Germany has already furnished the ground work for further negotiations and that the issues at stake are too important to the entire world for hasty action by this government.

The position of the Foreign Office is this:

1—Germany had a legal right to establish a submarine blockade of British ports, so long as strictly neutral shipping was not menaced.

2—Persons of neutral nationality should be prevented from sailing upon merchant ships owned by belligerent powers when they carry contraband of war, and especially when they are armed.

The foregoing principles are a reiteration of Germany's attitude ever since the "war zone" was established around the British isles and Northern France, but the continual repetition of them indicates that Germany will not repudiate her present stand, although she may modify it.

Foreign Secretary Von Jagow, in a statement to the press, outlined the reasons which impelled the German government to send an ad interim note to the United States government, instead of a final and definite reply to the American representations regarding the Lusitania and other ships that have been torpedoed and Germany's submarine policy.

ISSUES IMPORTANT.

"The issues involved," said Herr Von Jagow, "are of such importance, and the views in regard to the Lusitania show such variance, that the German government believed it essential to attempt to establish a common basis of fact before entering into a discussion of the issues involved.

"We hope and trust that the American government will take the same view of the case and let us know in what points their understanding of the facts differs from the German viewpoint as set forth in the note, and in what points they agree before looking for a direct answer to their communication.

"The American note, of course, leaves the way open for a preliminary discussion of the situation as suggested in the German note. I hope that such a common basis of fact, once established, may serve as the groundwork for further conversations."

The minister was unwilling to give a more definite outline or to comment on the suggestion that an arrangement might be reached on a basis of an inspection and certification by the American government of passenger ships not carrying war cargoes, pointing out that he did not feel entitled to anticipate, as the other departments of the government must be heard before suggestions could be definitely taken up or discussed.

BLAMES BRITAIN.

Dr. Von Jagow expressed pleasure at the newspaper announcement that American line steamers were not carrying contraband, but he suggested the advisability of supplementing such newspaper statements by more definite and authorative announcements.

Replying to a question, Dr. Von Jagow said that Germany from the outset had been willing to abandon her submarine war against merchantmen on return by Great Britain to the regulations of war regarding contraband generally accepted before the war, the specific condition being the lifting of the embargo on foodstuffs and raw materials now in the list of conditional contraband. It was not Germany's fault, but Great Britain's, he said, that the well meant proposals of the United States for a compromise failed.

"The question of foodstuffs and raw materials," Dr. Von Jagow said, "is not a question of necessity for Germany, but one of principle. Germany has shown, I think, that it cannot be starved out by Great Britain's embargo on foodstuffs. We may be a little short of some particular food product, but we have enough to live on and keep up the struggle.

"UNJUSTIFIED METHOD."

"The same is true of raw materials, with which, according to the London declaration, belligerents have no right to interfere when they are not specifically destined for the armed forces of an enemy. Germany is able to get along even if the imports of such materials are cut off. Germany, however, objects to the cool assumption of the British Cabinet that when it is unable to defeat the German armies legitimately on the battlefield, it is entitled to try to force the nation to its knees by economic pressure, disregarding all accepted precepts and regulations of war.

"The analogy of the besieged fortress does not apply to Germany. The resident who settles in a fortress does so cognizant of the risks and aware that he can leave before the siege begins; but there is no precedent for the siege of the civilian population of a whole nation in its own land with no possibility of escape. Germany will fight such an unjustified method of war with all the means at her disposal."

Dr. Von Jagow said he had absolutely no information regarding the American steamer Nebraskan which was damaged by an explosion in the Irish Sea last week, and in the absence of any definite news as to whether the ship was torpedoed or struck a mine, he declined to express any opinion as to the effect of the incident on the pending negotiations.

Full Text of Germany's Reply to U. S.

The following is the text of the German note:

The undersigned has the honor to submit to Ambassador Gerard the following answer to the communication of May 15 regarding the injury to American interests through German submarine warfare:

The Imperial government has subjected the communication of the American government to a thorough investigation. It entertains also a keen wish to cooperate in a frank and friendly way in clearing up a possible misunderstanding which may have arisen in the relations between the two governments through the events mentioned by the American government.

Regarding, firstly, the cases of the American steamers Cushing and Gulflight. The American embassy has alread been informed that the German government has no intention of submitting neutral ships in the war zone, which are guilty of no hostile acts, to attacks by a submarine or submarines or aviators. On the contrary, the German forces have repeatedly been instructed most specifically to avoid attacks on such ships.

If neutral ships in recent months have suffered through the German submarine warfare, owing to mistakes in identification, it is a question only of quite isolated and exceptional cases, which can be attributed to the British government's abuse of flags, together with the suspicious or culpable behavior of the masters of the ships.

The German government, in all cases in which it has been shown by its investigations that a neutral ship, not itself at fault, was damaged by German submarines or aviators, has expressed regret over the unfortunate accident and, if justified by conditions, has offered indemnification.

The cases of the Cushing and the Gulflight will be treated on the same principles. An investigation of both cases is in progress, the result of which will be communicated to the embassy. The investigation can, if necessary, be supplemented by an international call on the International Commission of Inquiry, as provided by Article II. of the Hague agreement of October 18, 1907.

When sinking the British steamer Falaba, the commander of the German submarine had the intention of allowing the passengers and crew a full opportunity for a safe escape. Only when the master did not obey the order to heave-to, but fled and summoned help by rocket signals, did the German commander order the crew and passengers by signals and megaphone to leave the ship within ten minutes. He actually allowed them twenty-three minutes' time and fired the torpedo only when suspicious craft were hastening to the assistance of the Falaba.

Regarding the loss of life by the sinking of the British passenger steamer Lusitania, the German government has already expressed to the neutral governments concerned its keen regret that citizens of their States lost their lives.

On this occasion the imperial government, however, cannot escape the impression that certain important facts having a direct bearing on the sinking of the Lusitania may have escaped the attention of the American government.

In the interest of a clear and complete understanding, which is the aim of both governmnts, the imperial government considers it first necessary to convince itself that the information accessible to both governments about the facts of the case is complete and in accord.

LUSITANIA CARRIED GUNS.

The government of the United States proceeds on the assumption that the Lusitania could be regarded as an ordinary unarmed merchantman. The imperial government allows itself in this connection to point out that the Lusitania was one of the largest and fastest British merchant ships, built with government funds as an auxiliary cruiser and carried expressly as such in the "navy list" issued by the British Admiralty.

It is further known to the imperial government, from trustworthy reports from its agents and neutral passengers, that for a considerable time practically all the more valuable British merchantmen have been equipped with cannon and ammunition and other weapons and manned with persons who have been specially trained in serving guns. The Lusitania, too, according to information received here, undoubtedly had cannon aboard which were mounted and concealed below decks.

The imperial government, further, has the honor to direct the particular attention of the American government to the fact that the British Admiralty, in a confidential instruction issued in February, 1915, recommended its mercantile shipping not only to seek protection under neutral flags and distinguishing marks, but also, while thus disguised, to attack German submarines by ramming. As a special incitation to merchantmen to destroy submarines, the British government also offered high prizes and has already paid such rewards.

"JUSTIFIED SELF DEFENCE."

The imperial government, in view of these facts indubitably known to it, is unable to regard British merchantmen in the zone of naval operations specified by the Admiralty staff of the German navy as "undefended." German commanders consequently are no longer able to observe the customary regulations of the prize law which they before always followed.

Finally, the imperial government must point out particularly that the Lusitania, on its last trip, as on earlier occasions, carried Canadian troops and war material, including no less than 5,400 cases of ammunition intended for the destruction of the brave German soldiers who are fulfilling their duty with self-sacrifice and devotion in the Fatherland's service.

The German government believes that it was acting in justified self-defence in seeking with all the means of warfare at its disposal to protect the lives of its soldiers by destroying ammunition intended for the enemy.

The British shipping company must have been aware of the danger to which the passengers aboard the Lusitania were exposed under these conditions. The company in embarking them notwithstanding this, attempted deliberately to use the lives of American citizens as protection for the ammunition aboard, and acted against the clear provisions of the American law, which expressly prohibits the forwarding of passengers on ships carrying ammunition and provides a penalty therefor. The company, therefor, is wantonly guilty of the death of so many passengers.

There can be no doubt, according to the definite report of the submarine's commander, which is further confirmed by all other information, that the quick sinking of the Lusitania is primarily attributable to the explosion of the ammunition shipment caused by a torpedo. The Lusitania's passengers would otherwise, in all human probability, have been saved.

AWAITS AMERICAN REPLY.

The imperial government considers the above mentioned facts important enough to recommend them to the attentive examination of the American government.

The imperial government, while withholding its final decision on the demands advanced in connection with the sinking of the Lusitania until receipt of an answer from the American government, feels impelled in conclusion to recall here and now that it took cognizance with satisfaction of the mediatory proposals submitted by the United States government to Berlin and London as a basis for a modus vivendi for conducting the maritime warfare between Germany and Great Britain. The imperial government, by its readiness to enter upon a discussion of these proposals, then demonstrated its good intentions in ample fashion. The realization of these proposals was defeated, as is well known, when the British government rejected these proposals.

The undersigned takes occasion, etc.

JAGOW.

SAY LUSITANIA CARRIED NO EXPLOSIVES CONTRARY TO LAW

NEW YORK, May 31.—Authorities declare that American law prohibits the carrying of explosives on ships leaving American ports with passengers.

By a ruling of Secretary of Commerce Nagel in 1911 it was held that ships with passengers could carry small arms without restriction, and it was under this ruling that the Lusitania was permitted to leave port with "small arms ammunition," consisting of 5,400 cases of cartridges, in her cargo. Mr. Winter of the Cunard Line said that the only ammunition carried on the Lusitania was in the shape of cartridges.

It is explained that "explosives" in the meaning of the law includes large arms, shells, powder and nitroglycerine.

The act relating to steerage passengers makes it a crime for the master of a ship to carry "explosives" on a ship carrying passengers. The steamship inspection act also provides that vessels with passengers cannot carry "explosives" at the same time.

The report of Ambassador Page and Consul-General Skinner, at London, on the sinking of the Falaba by a German submarine, in which Leon C. Thresher, an American, lost his life, was received by the State Department on April 20. It coincided partly with the German version of the affair contained in the German note. It was based largely on the English judicial inquiry.

The report showed that the German submarine signalled the Falaba to stop. She did not stop, but instead increased her speed. The submarine pursued her for fifteen minutes. The submarine then signalled that she was about to torpedo the Falaba and warned those aboard to abandon her. The Falaba stopped and crew and passengers took to the boats.

The witnesses at the inquiry differed as to the time elapsing between the signal and the torpedoing of the vessel. Some said it was ten minutes, some twenty. It was established, however, that many were still aboard or just leaving when the Falaba was sunk.

WILSON STUDIES GERMAN NOTE TO THE UNITED STATES

official text also stated bluntly that the British government "rejected" the American proposal for the limitation of warfare, proposed under the German and British blockade orders.

Mr. Wilson already had received the unofficial translation of the note as made in Berlin, and the official text was a matter of form. The German note is even more disappointing than the forecasts of its context, according to the pessimistic opinion which prevailed in official circles when the actual text of the German reply became available.

What is the President going to do about it? This is the question that Washington and the nation now are asking. Although the note is couched in conciliatory terms, officials privately regard the German document as one lacking in the frankness which this nation expected. The Lusitania accident, costing more than 1,000 lives, is referred to with "keen regret" by the German government, but it then switches to charges that the Lusitania was an armed auxiliary cruiser and carried war munitions for the destruction of brave German soldiers.

Germany virtually blames England for the Lusitania disaster.

In no sentence is there found a trace of the "disavowal" of intent to sink the giant liner, which was specifically asked by the Wilson note.

PRESIDENT TO ANALYZE THE CASE CLOSELY.

The President will analyze the German note sentence for sentence, that he may acquaint himself both with its few direct statements and its implinations.

That the chief executive himself will shape the reply to the note, just as he did the first communication to Germany is accepted. It is taken for granted that the President will express his regret that Germany has not replied more directly to the former communication, and has not seemed to take at its face value the "strict accountability" warning of this government at the outbreak of Germany's submarine warfare and following her "War zone" proclamation which promised to endanger American lives.

"In conveying this regret to Germany the President is expected to intimate broadly, if he does not say it directly, that the United States and its people will not be sympathetic toward delayed consideration of the American demands for a disavowal and a promise of reparation concerning the Lusitania's sinking.

The second note of the President will be even more vital than the first, because it will mean increased tension between the nation. With decisive action promised in Mexico, with a controversy still on with Great Britain regarding its detention of non-contraband American shipments for neutral ports, and with Germany making no promise of ceasing its submarine warfare, but hinting instead that the United States persuade Great Britain to discontinue its efforts to "starve out" Germany, the President and his cabinet are now face to face with issues as grave as any which have arisen since the Civil war.

LONDON PAPERS EXPECT OUTBREAK OF WRATH IN U. S.

LONDON, May 31.—The following editorial comments on German's reply appear in the London morning papers:

The Daily Chronicle—If President Wilson accedes to the demand for more delay, we imagine it will be on condition that Germany stops submarining. Considerable of the time elapsed since his note was presented has been used by Germany to submarine a number of ships, including the American ship Nebraskan. Manifestly it would be giving her all she wanted, to concede further delay.

Daily Standard—Germany mainmaintains an attitude toward the United States scarcely calculated to conciliate American opinion. We may expect an outburst of uncontrollable indignation. Neutral ships which do not display their neutral flags conspicuously enough must expect to be torpedoed. Perhaps this is the excuse the Kaiser's government thinks it is offering for the attack on the Nebraskan.

"U. S. COMPLAINT DISAPPEARS," SAYS BERLIN NEWSPAPER

By International News Service.

BERLIN, May 31.—German papers highly praise the German reply to President Wilson's note on German submarine warfare. The Koelnische Zeitung says:

"The facts that are made public in Germany's reply show that the torpedoing of the Lusitania was completely justified. The complaint of the United States totally disappears and it remains for the American ogvernment now to make direct complaint to England, which is the proper quarter to make protect anyway."

ELIOT HOLDS UP U. S. AS EXAMPLE

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, speaking today at the memorial exercises at Sanders Theatre, said that if the present warring European nations eventually agree upon a plan of peaceful, rather than warlike, competitive development, their action will undoubtedly be due to the convincing example set by the United States after its own great Civil War.

Such a happy outcome of the European struggle, he added, would again prove that our heroes of '61-'65 did not die in vain. He said:

"We are commemorating today the actors in a war fifty years ago, which prevented the disruption of the American Union and preserved, for a long future, an experienced, free commonwealth strongly rooted in a broad and rich land. We are doing this in the midst of a European war of unexampled extent, which is going to decide whether despotic military government or constitutional government shall prevail in Europe.

"If the powers which hepresent public liberty and peaceful rather than warlike competitive development shall ultimately win, their victor ywill be largely due to the influence of the United States as a convincing example of the wise application of federal principles.

"Then we may say to our heroes of the Civil War—your sacrifices brought good, not to your fellow-countrymen alone, but to the entire human race. You builded better than you knew. Through your efforts and sufferings, government of the people, by the people and for the people was preserved over a vast area of the American continent, and now, through like sufferings abroad, to the nations of Europe."

Major Henry Lee Higginson, '55, presided, and President A. P. Fitch of the Andover Theological Seminary was chaplain.

Followin gthe custom of years the students and invited guests marched to the theatre from the college yard.

BECKER THROUGH WITH RELIGION

NEW YORK, May 31.—Former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, who has been denied a third trial for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, to quote his words, is "through" so far as appeals for clemency to the Governor or efforts toward further hearings of his case in the Federal courts are concerned. In arrogant manner Becker, in the conference he had with his lawyer, Martin T. Manton, and Mrs. Becker, not only said he would not lend assistance if a fight were made for his life, but that he would "repudiate" any effort Mrs. Becker might make to save him.

He is not hysterical and he isn't brooding over his fate. He is simply all temper now—angrily denouncing God and man and swearing that he will go to the chair without making any graft revelations and will die with the feeling that the troubled consciences of those "those who sent him to the chair" will be his revenge.

Becker was received into the Catholic Church after his arrest for the Rosenthal murder, but the moment he heard that a new trial had been denied to him he cast religion aside. He had told Father Cashin, the prison chaplain, on the day before the decision was handed down that he wished to receive communion. After learning of the decision he refused to receive the sacrament when Father Cashin went to the deathhouse.

The decision of last Tuesday has changed Becker so much mentally that there would be no surprise among those who have seen and noted the change if Becker were to collapse mentally and physically as the day of his execution approaches. The authority for these statements adds that Becker will not make graft revelations for the reason that he has nothing to tell except accusations against himself as a grafter.

"I'm through, I tell you," Becker cried to his wife and lawyer emphatically. "I've lost faith in God and man. If God Almighty walked into this room right now I wouldn't kneel down to Him. I don't want anything done. I won't have anything done, understand?"

"But perhaps the United States Court can be——" the suggestion was begun.

"No, I tell you," stormed Becker. "I won't make any effort to escape on a technicality."

"I'll go to the Governor myself," Mrs. Becker broke in.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," said Becker. "Ill publicly repudiate your appeal if you do. No one is to appeal for me. But some day after I'm gone these rats will speak up and then the responsibility for sending me to eternity will fall on the man who sent me there."

ATHENS, May 31.—News of a thrilling incident during the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts in which Admiral Gueprattte, commander of the French fleet, had a hairbreadth escape from death, was received here from Mitylene. The Anglo-French fleet bombarded the Turkish forts on the Dardanelles violently for three hours on Sunday, says a dispatch from Tenedos.

NEWSBOYS MAKE 500 CRIPPLED CHILDREN HAPPY

One of the autoloads of happy children on way to newsboys' picnic.

Group of the newsboys' guests giving a demonstration of patriotism and gratitude to their hosts.

Five hundred crippled and orphan children were the guests of Boston newsboys at an outing at Caledonian Park today. The expenses, except autos donated, were contributed by members of the Boston Newsboys' Union, who assessed themselves a portion of a day's receipts from selling papers.

At 9:30 the children began to gather at Postoffice square and were met by automobiles and special cars, which transported them to the grove. The Newsboys' Band and the Italian Marine Band furnished the music, and each child was presented an American flag.

At noon and late in the afternoon refreshments of sandwiches, candies, peanuts and popcorn were served.

During the afternoon there was an entertainment, and sports were indulged in by those able to play. A feature of the games was a baseball contest between the children from the St. Botolph School for Crippled Children and the newsboys. The crippled children arranged it so that those without legs should do the batting while those with legs do the running.

Among those who contributed cars were the Hotel & Railroad News Company, the New England News Company, the Saturday Evening Post, the City of Boston, the City of Cambridge and about thirty private individuals.

The committee in charge was Nathan S. Sodekson, chairman; Benjamin H. Robrish, secretary; Charles Frasca, treasurer; Samuel Sklar, chairman of souvenirs; Benjamin Waldman, chairman of entertainments and Samuel D. Saxe, chairman of automobiles.

TURN IN ALL SERIES "D" VOTES BEFORE 5 P. M. TOMORROW

Well, candidates, how did you like the first vote standing which appeared in yesterday's Sunday American? Was YOUR name as high up in the list as it should have been? Or, perhaps you were one of those waiting to see what "the other fellow" had. In either event, things will happen fast from now on to the finish.

In less than five weeks, the American's California Tours Contest will be a thing of the past. Four weeks from next Saturday the last vote coupon will appear in the American.

The leaders in yesterday's vote list may be the tail-enders by that time and the tail-enders now may be the leaders then—that's for you to decide, candidates.

Many of the candidates have expressed their delight at the opportunities shown by yesterday's vote list. In many cases they seem to think that the candidate occupying the twenty-fifth place in the vote list would be so far ahead of everyone else that it would be impossible to reach that coveted position.

Now they see for themselves that what the Contest Editor has been telling them is true—that it's merely a matter of a little energy, a little extra vote-gathering effort, a little real ambition—and a place among the leading twenty-five is within reach.

Yesterday's vote standing contained only those votes polled in Series "A" and "B." Series "C" vote standing will be printed one week from next Sunday, June 13.

It's the fighting spirit that counts! Anything that's worth having in this old world of ours is worth fighting for.

If you are satisfied that these tours to the Pacific Coast, under the auspices of the Boston American, are going to be the greatest trips ever given by any newspaper, you should be willing to put forth every effort in the next five weeks to secure for yourself a place among the twenty-five winners. You can win—if you will! Get busy!

RUSSIANS TOOK 14 GUNS AT SIENIAWA

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, May 31.—Official dispatches from the front today increased the magnitude of the victory won by the Russians against the Austro-German forces in the region of Sieniawa, on the San River, north of Jaroslau (Galicia). Fourteen guns and 7,000 prisoners were taken from the Teutonic allies, according to the following official statement:

"How much reliance may be placed upon the statements of the Germans and Austrians concerning the battle of Sieniawa on Thursday and Friday is shown by official dispatches received from the Russian front. According to the Austro-German communiques the Austrians and the Germans were compelled to retire before numerically superior Russian forces, abandoning six guns in the crossing of the San. The number of guns captured by us was fourteen, not six. We took 6,000 prisoners at Sieniawa and 1,000 more at Lezaichow, some of whom were Germans.

SEVERE LOSS IN KILLED.

"In their obstinate defence of the fortified positions at Piggany, Czerre and Rywi (a line nearly seven miles long) as well as at Sieniawa, the enemy's losses in killed exceeded the total number of prisoners taken. This certainly proved that the hostile detachments thrown back across the San at Sieniawa were far from weak.

"As to the alleged overwhelming forces of Russians engaged in this battle that consisted of the Third Caucasian Corps which had been through incessant fighting for three weeks previously. The Third Caucasian troops had been referred to more than once in the Austro-German official statements as having been partially destroyed.

"In the capture of Lezachow, on May 24, we took ten filled kitchens and other material as well as the one thousand prisoners already mentioned.

SUCCESSES ON THE SAN.

"The Germans began a counter attack, but were surrounded by superior forces and nearly annihilated. We took six hundred prisoners.

"In Galicia the Russians have cleared the enemy from the right bank of the San to the mouth of the Lubaczowka (about five miles south of Sieniawa and seven miles north of Jaroslau). We have also delivered several attacks against the main force of the Germans retiring from their positions in the Lubaczowka district and Tusla on the Vistula. In these operations, within twenty-four hours, the Russians captured guns, transports and searchlights.

"In the [illegible]-Dniester district obstinate fighting continues. In the Dolina district we have driven the enemy from the right bank of the Switzer River (the Zmacka)."

BRITISH PRESS REGARDS THE REPLY AS UNSATISFACTORY

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, May 31.—British newspapers, in commenting today upon the German reply to President Wilson's note protesting against Germany's submarine warfare, declare that the document is evasive and unsatisfactory. They predict that the reply will cause much annoyance in Washington.

"The German reply is precisely what was expected," says the Westminster Gazette. "It avoids a direct answer to the specific questions asked by President Wilson. The German government is only trying to gain time."

The Evening Standard holds that the German reply is beside the mark.

"When Washington wants to discuss the submarine attacks upon neutral vessels on the plane of high international policy, Berlin replies by arguments based on technicalities," says the Evening Standard."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"If the slaughter of the Lusitania's passengers is defended on the ground that the vessel was carrying ammunition, we wonder what excuse is available for Saturday's attempt to destroy the Megantic."

2,000 HORSES IN WORK PARADE

Boston AMERICAN work horses were successful in today's Work Horse parade, ten out of fifteen entered taking first prize, and each of the fifteen first, second or third prizes.

More than 2,000 horses participated, and throngs along Commonwealth avenue saw them move past and in front of the judges stand between Clarendon and Berkeley street.

The AMERICAN also won a First Stable prize for best stable conditions.

C. Bacigalupo, an AMERICAN driver, was awarded a silver watch charm for prize winning two years in succession. The drivers of the horses which won for the AMERICAN in the heavy horse class were Bacigalupo, John Kernan, Leo Leach and Edward Carroll. The drivers in the fast, light-horse class were John Belyea, Charles Mayer, Mike McKee and William J. Malloy. Drivers in the route horse class were James G. Walker, Edward Jones, Arthur Dorr, Tim Helvitz, Charles Hennessey and Harry Cantor.

Harry Cantor's Percheron trick horse was the hit of the parade, and the way he juggled apples and bananas into his mouth won applause. The route horses attracted attention byp their open bridles, the horses being trained to start and stop by watching their drivers instead of requiring commands.

E. H. Richards, foreman of the AMERICAN'S stables, was commended.

Mayor Curley presented the Lawrence Gold Medal for the best four-horse team to Richard C. Boates, driver of the Merrifield & Co. teams.

Patrick Murphy of the Boston Sanitary Deparement, forty-six years in the service, was the oldest driver in the parade.

Frank Bavin's ten-horse team won a first prize.

The heaviest team, blacks weighing 3,620 pounds, were owned by R. Woodsome, and driven by Archie Farrell.

Five hundred and [illegible] prizes were awrded drivers.

The oldest horse in the parade, 'Black Jack,' 42, with 33 years of service, was owned by Jenness & Co., and driven by Christian Lorenson. He won a gold medal. He has won championships in two previous years. This was his fifth year in the parade.

QUARTER OF MILE GAIN FOR FRENCH

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, May 31.—The great battle between the Germans and the allies north of Arras continues with unabated intensity. The official communique issued today by the War Office tells of artillery dueling and counter attacks, which resulted in gains for the French soldiers. Southeast of Neuville St. Vaast the French advanced a quarter of a mile. The communique in full follows:

"Extremely violent artillery duels are occurring in the region north of Arras. German attempts to recapture their lost ground at Notre Dame de Lorette were repulsed. Fierce fighting southeast of Neuville St. Vaast resulted in a gain of four hundred metres for the French, who took 150 German prisoners, four of them officers."

HEAR SUIT AGAINST THE LONDON TIMES

LONDON, May 31.—Hearings in a suit brought against the London Times for betraying the fact that the last French reserves have been called to the colors were begun today. The suit is considered the government's first step in retaliation for the steady criticism of the Times since early in the war.

The suit is brought by the government under the "Defence of the Realm" act. The government charges the Times with betraying vital information by publishing a letter from Major Richardson which pleaded for conscription and told of the French calling of the last reserves.

This suit by the government is the latest chapter in the feud, which originated when the government barred correspondents from the front, between Lord Kitchener and the Times. The Times it was which precipitated the recent cabinet crisis.

The events in the relations between Kitchener and the Times, in their order, are these:

It was the Times and the Daily Mail which called for Kitchener's appointment as war secretary. He was named.

After the British defeat at Mons, the Times published the story of the slaughter of English regiments there, and of the disastrous retreat to Paris.

Immediately, correspondents were forbidden access to the front. The Times protested, without avail.

When later British contingents were being shipped to the front, the Times published the fact.

Kitchener sent for the responsible editor and warned him that publication of such important information in the future would mean that he, the editor, would be shot within twenty-four hours.

Some two or three weeks ago, the Times published a dispatch from a correspondent who had been the personal guest at the front of General French, in which the fact was made plain that English lives had been wasted because Kitchner was sending General French shrapnel instead of high explosive shells.

Prominent Liberal members of Parliament decided to force a public debate on this fatter. Asquith's personal appeal and the Prime Minister's promise to form a coalition cabinet, alone succeeded in preventing the debate.

The Times and the Daily Mail, Lord Northcliffe's papers, attacked Kitchener. The Stock Exchange burned copies of the two papers and adopted resolutions in Kitchener's support.

Kitchener was shorn of half his powers in the reorganized cabinet.

Now the government has taken action against the Times for a more recent article betraying the practical exhaustion of the French reserves.

GERMAN MASONS BREAK WITH ITALIAN BROTHERS

BERLIN, May 29.—The German Grand Lodge of Free Masons today adopted the following declaration:

In view of the attitude of the Italian Free Masons, who, inspired by French sympathizers, took part in the political struggle leading to the war, and thereby violated the cardinal principle of Free Masonry expressly forbidding such methods, the German Grand Lodge hereby severs all former relations with Italian and French Free Masonry.

Toward Free Masons in other hostile lands the Grand Lodge reaffirms the decision adopted at an earlier date that all relations of various Grand Lodges be suspended from the outbreak of hostilities.

ITALY CONTINUES TRENT INVASION

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, May 31.—Despite bad weather the offensive operations of the Italian army of invasion in Trent continues without a check. The Austrian forts in the Carnia Mountains are being bombarded, and Italian forces are threatening the Austrian defensive works in the Gail Valley.

A strong Italian detachment supported by mountain howitzers have advanced along the Valentina Valley and laid siege to Malborghette. (Malborghetto lies in the Fella Valley about ten miles inside of the Austrian frontier.)

Farther to the south another Italian army which is pushing through the Baccolana valley is threatening Predil Pass. Predil Pass lies alongside of Predil Mountain about 15 miles northwest of Karfhreit or Kaporetto. It is 3,795 feet high and is held by strong Austrian forts defended with heavy guns.

Heavy rain in upper Istria have flooded most of the rivers into mountain torrents.

The Italian Ministry of Marine has closed the Strait of Messina to navigation at night and on cloudy days.

A dispatch from Milan says that Italian soldiers discovered a telegraphic apparatus hidden beneath the altar of a church at Kaporette. Several Austrian priests were arrested on the charge of being spies and will be court martialed.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, King Peter of Servia and King Nicolas of Montenegro have exchanged telegrams of felicitation.

Austrian losses in the first week of the war with the Italians, were 3,866, of these 1,500 were killed. The Austro-German forces on the frontier are estimated at 650,000 men, but so far they have offered only feeble resistance to the advance of the Italians in both Trent and Istria. There are seventy batteries of heavy Austrian guns planted along the border.

Rheumatism! Here Are Some Real Facts

How to Overcome the Torture Without Harmful Drugs.

A legion of people have used S. S. S. and have overcome the worst forms of rheumatism.

This disease of the blood is little understood because of its strange symptoms, scarcely two people having it exactly alike. And yet, no matter what its form or how painful and distressing, S. S. S. seems to have almost a divine influence in driving it out, releasing the nerves from pain and clearing the joints and muscles so they work without restraint. The best explanation for this happy result is the fact that in S. S. S. are certain ingredients which act as an antidote. They are nature's providence to man.

Just as the meats, fats, salts and sugars of our daily food provide us with nourishment, so does S. S. S. give to the blood the exact medicinal requirement to clear the stream, drive out impurities and reconstruct the body if destructive germs have gained a foothold. ADVERTISE YOUR WANTS IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

*"And Jesus said unto her, Woman, hath no man condemned thee? * * * Neither do I condemn thee: go and sin no more."*

This text inspired the writing of David Graham Phillips' greatest novel,

"The Story of Susan Lenox Her Fall and Rise"

By DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

Dr. CHARLES H. PARKHURST, the famous clergyman, says:

"This great novel, having read it in manuscript, its spirit and purpose have not passed from my memory.

"The heroine is depicted as an illegitimate child, and the purpose of the fiction is to show the blight that attaches to innocent illegitimacy.

"The treatment accorded her by her kindred, who by ordination of nature ought to have protected and cherished her, illustrates in a graphic way the vicious tendency imminent in human nature to think the worst of people rather than the best.

"It is one of those fictions that has a meaning, the only kind of fiction that moral and intelligent people have any right to spend their time over or give their thought to."

EXPERT PRAISES AMERICAN'S FIGHT FOR BETTER STREETS

Charles Henry Davis, of this city, president of the National Highways Association and a well-known engineer, says that a few millions wisely invested in improvement and maintenance of streets in Boston would result in the saving of millions and protect the public health.

Mr. Davis is an authority on highways. His opinion carries weight. His article published today is another ringing indorsement of the AMERICAN'S campaign for better streets in Boston.

By CHARLES HENRY DAVIS.

The streets of Boston are bad, have been bad and are likely to continue to be bad until a radical change is made. Pave a street properly and some gas company rips it up forthwith and leaves it unfit for months. If not a gas company, then an electric light company. If not an electric light company, then the city itself or a street railway company. And so it goes.

I have probably driven over more miles of streets and highways than most men. There is not an approach to Boston that is well paved except to a limited extent, and then only for a few months after construction.

St. Botolph street was finished a few days ago—pot holes are already in evidence. Lower Boylston street has been repaired or repaved every year for several years past. So it is with many miles of our streets.

Why allow this? There is no need or sense in it. Boston can have as fine pavements as those of foreign cities if she wants to. Even the smaller Western cities do better, much better. And as for the larger middle and far western cities their boulevards put the streets of Boston to shame.

CENTRALIZE AUTHORITY.

What's the remedy? Simple, very simple—if done.

First and foremost, concentrate authority and responsibility into one man's hands. A man both honest and capable.

Next, the prevention of constant street opening for city or public service purposes. In other words, something more is needed besides good pavements. Any pavement constantly subjected to tearing up for gas, electricity, water and railroad tracks cannot be satisfactorily replaced.

The foreign method provides for this by either providing or requiring vaults and conduits or preventing removal of street surfaces except at stated intervals, or when repairs or rebuilding thereof is required. At such times all occupants of space under the street surface are notified to perform any needed work. This is required of them at such time and not otherwise permitted except necessity requires, in which event replacement of the surface is required at the cost of those responsible therefor.

And last, but by no means least, we do not yet build our pavements, whether street or road, in any manner approaching permanence. A road or street is composed of three main parts—(a) the foundation upon which it rests; (b) the pavement itself being the body of the road, and (c) the surface.

For a perfect roadway the foundation must be immovable. It must not be affected by the weather. By cold or heat or moisture. This is largely accomplished by proper drainage or the prevention of moisture getting through the road material to the foundation. Of course, it must be solid and heavy enough to hold the road and its traffic.

STONE BLOCK PAVEMENTS.

The pavement itself or the body of the roadway should be chosen for the particular requirements of that particular street. Due regard should be had for available material adjacent to the locality. Stone block pavements suitably laid are especially appropriate for heavy duty streets of Boston.

This is not saying that other kinds may not be equally suitable. The weight of material used is of special importance. On streets having very frequent, very heavy or very rapid service great weight is needed. Sheer dead weight is something often disregarded and most essential.

The surface finish does not and cannot always be separated from the body of the pavement itself. If made and put on separately it must have the qualification of adhesion to the road proper. This adhesion must be of such character as to prevent flaking or separation from the body of the road. Any finish must be smooth. Any finish that does not tend to wear down smooth lacks the essentials of a perfect road finish.

Of course, it should be understood that general requirements to be approached as nearly as possible is what is in mind herein.

That Boston sadly needs immediate paving no one can deny who travels over her streets to any considerable extent. The saving in wear and tear of all vehicles would exceed one-half the present cost. The saving of power for a given load would likely be nearly as much. The reduction of noise and consequent nervous saving would be of no small moment, while the reduction of the death rate has a much more intimate relationship to good pavements than most people imagine.

Good pavements mean cleaner and more nearly dustless highways. Dust carries most of our prevalent communicative diseases.

The lesson is obvious.

Millions of dollars a year would be saved in many ways if a few millions were spent wisely, efficiently and honestly.

Cities are usually known and their reputation often largely depends upon what the observer can see. People can see parks, buildings, monuments and street pavements more than any other objects in any city. The observer judges from what he sees. He also judges from what he feels. He can both see and feel a pavement. He can only see the other things mentioned. The less he feels the pavement the better for the reputation of that particular city.

British Flag Causes a Stir on Waterfront

With a British flag snapping at her bow, a long, low-built, gray-painted, rakish-looking craft which came racing up Boston Harbor early today had the entire waterfront guessing for more than half an hour.

The general appearance of the boat together with the flag she was flying fooled even wise old harbor officials into thinking she was a British torpedo boat rushing for cover.

Once marine glasses were brought into play, however, it was quickly ascertained that the craft was the steam yacht Winchester of New York, with a Gotham party aboard. The presence of the British flag was later explained by the fact that the boat wa built in England.

The boat anchored off the New Haven docks.

N. Y. HOLDS COHEN MURDER SUSPECT

After killing Samuel Cohen in the cellar of a house on West Springfield street, Saturday, one of the murderers went to "Uncle Ned's" pawnshop on Northampton street, it was learned today, redeemed a suit of clothing and bought a shovel with which the hole was dug to bury the body.

The police have a description of this suit of clothes. Police circulars are shortly to be sent out describing the men sought by the police for the murder.

A suspect has been arrested in New York; and Mrs. Martha Bense, landlady of the house where the murder occurred, went to New York today to see if he is one of the men.

Mrs. Bense is certain that she can identify the murderers. With her is Detective Sergeant Fred Allen of the East Dedham street station, who also knows, by sight, the two men believed by the police to have committed the murder.

In the belief that other murders may have been committed in the house, the police today will have dug up the cellar of the house in West Springfield street. The elaborate search of the possible hiding places in the city will be resumed today. The police are not satisfied that both fugitives have left the city.

The New York suspect, who answers the description furnished by Mrs. Bense and by Morris Taitel, the other junkman who was imprisoned in a closet while Cohen was being murdered, declared when he was arrested that he was Alexander Novick of New Bedford. He has been unable to give a satisfactory account of his movements, however, or give any definite reason for going to New York.

While the police were scouring the city and scanning suspicious faces at all the terminals, nearly 7,000 people crowded Rose street, from Harrison avenue to Albany street, where the brief funeral services were being held. Cohen's home at No. 21 Rose street, was far too small to admit even the vanguard of this immense crowd.

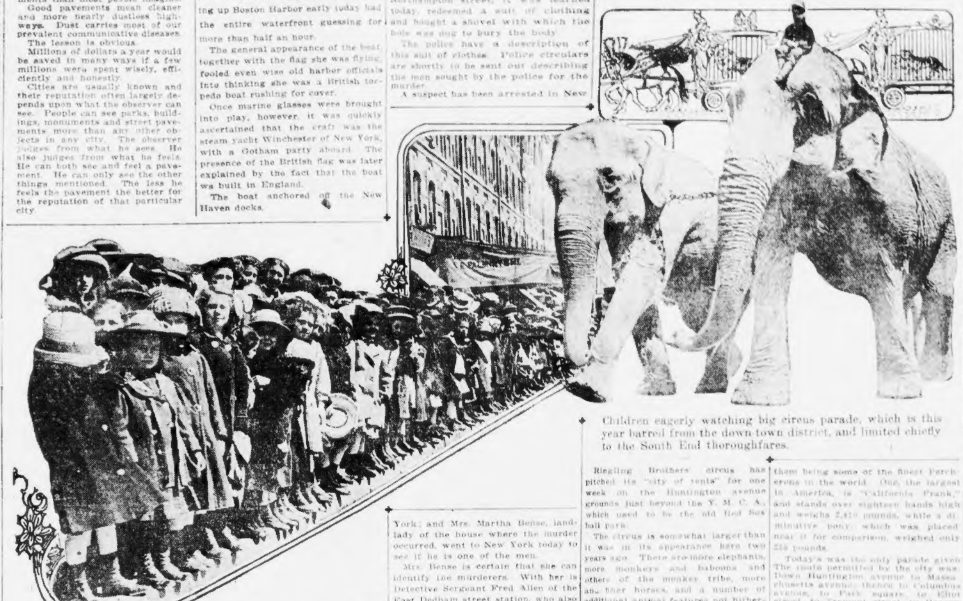
Accordingly, the body of the murdered man was carried into the street, and the simple services were held in the open air. Two carriages made up the cortege. In the first was Max Cohen, seventeen years, a son, and Jake Bloom, the junk dealer for whom Cohen worked. The pall bearers were members of the three societies of which Cohen had been secretary at different times.

Yesterday's search of the cellar of the house at West Springfield street disclosed four dynamite sticks, fuses attached. These had been hidden in the cold air box of the furnace. In the room occupied by Cohen's slayers was found an elaborate kit of burglar's tools.

These discoveries lead the police to believe that the two fugitives were members of a gang, probably dope fiends, who have been systematically holding up people, robbing stores and making occasional attempts at safes.

The two men are known as "Joe" and "Frank." Their burglar kit comprises jimmies, diamond point drills, lock picks, fuses and the like. The murder of Cohen is believed by the police to have been too brutal except for demoralized dope fiends. They point out that there was apparently no need to kill Cohen, as he could have been bound and gagged if he had refused to give up his money without fighting.

CIRCUS PITCHES 'CITY OF TENTS' HERE FOR WEEK



Children eagerly watching big circus parade, which is this year barred from the down-town district, and limited chiefly to the South End thoroughfares.

Ringling Brothers' circus has pitched its "city of tents" for one week on the Huntington avenue grounds just beyond the Y. M. C. A., which used to be the old Red Sox ball park.

The circus is somewhat larger than it was in its appearance here two years ago. There are more elephants, more monkeys and baboons and others of the monkey tribe, more and finer horses, and a number of additional animal features not hitherto seen.

A larger number of foreign performers will be seen than ever before on account of the war, which has driven circuses in Europe out of business. Among these are Spaniards, Chinese, Japanese, Austrians, Germans, French, Turks, Russians and Balkans. Indians and Mexicans will also perform.

The menagerie contains 108 cages and is valued at $1,000,000. One robe worn by an elephant is valued at $17,000.

In all, there are twenty acres of tents, the largest one being 580 feet long and capable of seating 11,000 persons. At the other section of tents, located on the left side of Longwood avenue opposite the Harvard Medical School, more than 700 horses are being taken care of, among them being some of the finest Percherons in the world. One, the largest in America, is "California Frank," and stands over eighteen hands high and weighs 2,410 pounds, while a diminutive pony, which was placed near it for comparison, weighed only 218 pounds.

Today's was the only parade given. The route permitted by the city was: Down Huntington avenue to Massachusetts avenue, thence to Columbus avenue, to Park square, to Eliot street, to Tremont street, to Beacon street, to Charles street, to Park square, to St. James avenue, to Huntington avenue and circus grounds. The parade was about three miles long, with fifty clowns, all the animals, twenty-five open dens, over thirty of the elephants, nearly all of the 700 horses, and a large part of the 1,270 persons connected with the circus.

GERMANS SCORED BY DR. VAN ALLEN

Germany's reply to the United States was denounced today at the meeting of Baptist ministers in Chipman Hall by the Rev. William H. van Allen, D.D., rector of the Church of the Advent, who said that the mildest thing to do would be to recall the American ambassador in Berlin. The suggestion was received with a loud applause.

"The reply of Germany is nothing else but outrageously insolent because it is couched in such ambiguous language," he maintained. "That the American government in its attitude in this matter will either prove itself to be a fool or a tool is the assumption of the German government. I am not afraid to say that a [illegible] the sinking of the Lusitania to go without an effectual protest.

PRAISE FOR PRESIDENT.

"Do we mean that nothing shall happen in this country without the dictation of this frenzied madness of the German government. That mad frenzy of desperation may have a short time to run, for the judgment of God may descend on that murderous government."

The audience welcomed the utterances of the speaker with prolonged applause.

"I do pray God to direct and guide the President of the United States at this time, and it is well that he is there in that position and not some one else," he continued. "He is a Christian scholar and gentleman, and I am told that at a cabinet meeting lately he alluded to the need of praying at this critical time. That is the man at the head of our country.

"I want to say still further that if by lifting my finger at this present moment I could stop the war in Europe, I would chain my hand to my side."

In referring to the way that the German government was avoiding the issue of the Lusitania, he said:

"DEVILISH BUSINESS."

"There is the futility of the whole devilish business, gentlemen. I'm not swearing, and I would like to say to the Kaiser of the German government in the words of the imprecatory psalms: 'Let his days be few and let another take his office.'

"Hell gaped and hell's breath came out in the sinking of the Lusitania."

Upon motion of the Rev. Francis W. O'Brien of Somerville a telegram was sent to President Wilson pledging to him the loyalty and support of the hundred members of the Baptist ministers' conference of Boston and vicinity.

WILSON MAY BAR ARMS FOR MEXICO

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Women and children trampled to death in the crowds fighting for food around the relief cars, starvation spreading from one end of Mexico to the other, food riots and [illegible] following in the wake of [illegible]—these are the appalling conditions reported in a statement issued by the American Red Cross.

This statement, confirming official reports received by the President, has strengthened him in his determination to issue a drastic warning, after the cabinet meeting tomorrow, to the leaders of the Mexican factions.

In that note the President will point out how patiently the American government has waited for the Mexican factions to adjust the problem themselves and how helpless the Mexican people generally have become in the hands of the military elements, no one of which seems capable of establishing a stable government.

The statement which is to be sent to all the factional leaders will not announce the course which the United States expects to follow in case an agreement does not result, but will point out that conditions have become intolerable and must be remedied by outside interference, if there are no elements in the country with sufficient capacity to rescue the republic from the state of anarchy.

What the President is considering to carry out his warning, if the attitude of the revolutionary leaders toward his humanitarian plans shall make it necessary for him to take drastic action, is to put an embargo on the exportation of arms and ammunition to Mexico, which would speedily bring the revolution to a close, and probably follow that up with naval demonstrations in front of the principal ports.

Just as he reached home after a visit to Woodlawn Cemetery, Everett, where he had decorated the graves of relatives, Orrin E. BURNED, SMOKING CIGAR IN GARAGE

S. N. Drew of South Central avenue, Wollaston, was burned from head to foot as the result of his smoking a cigar in Charles P. Gould's garage on Adams street, Quincy, today. He is in a serious condition at the Quincy Hospital. Drew and his wife had planned on a holiday outing in their automobile. He is local agent for the Barrett Manufacturing Company.

He discovered that his supply of gasoline was low and drove his car to Gould's garage. Mrs. Drew remained outside. While the oil was flowing through the pipe Drew is said to have stood close to the tank with his lighted cigar. There was an explosion.

Mrs. Gould, wife of the garage owner, says Drew seemed suddenly to become a living torch. Her husband ran in, and at the risk of his own life, turned off the flowing gasoline before the flames reached the tanks containing hundreds of gallons.

Gould then turned the fire extinguisher on Drew, whose clothes were almost burned off. The supply shed was damaged. Mrs. Drew became hysterical. She tried to rush into the flames to save her husband. Bystanders had to hold her.

GIRL'S BODY IN POND; MYSTERY

HARDWICK, Vt., May 31.—State Attorney Norton is investigating the death of Miss Annie Lorimer, eighteen, whose body, badly bruised, was found in Lake Hardwick.

The girl had been missing for four days and search had been made all over the state for her. She disappeared after attending a prayer meeting in the Baptist Church.

When the body was found about forty feet from the shore the outer clothing was missing and the face and arms were badly bruised.

Dr. S. E. Darling, medical examiner, will perform an autopsy today to determine the cause of death. While he is working over the body officers will question residents in the vicinity of the lake to find out if any one was seen with the young girl when she left the prayer meeting.

So far, state officials believe the girl committed suicide. Her mother, Mrs. John Lorimer, declares the girl was despondent. She believes her daughter took her own life. Neighbors declare that the young girl's home life was not happy.

"FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A." NO. 9

Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Md.
"Father of Religious Liberty in America"

HISTORY proves, to their eternal honor, that the Catholics were the first in America to advocate the Freedom of all sects to worship at any shrine they chose to bend a knee. Of all the cavaliers of Maryland, none were more noble, and none adored Liberty more than Charles Carroll, who, with his kinsman, Archbishop John Carroll, strove for the hereditary rights of mankind to practice Civil and Religious Liberty. Carroll was one of the richest and most learned men in the Colonies, and when he proudly affixed his name to our immortal Declaration of Independence he courted the confiscation of his vast estates. A bystander facetiously remarked, as he did so, "There goes a few millions." He was elected to the National Convention which adopted the Constitution of the United States, but illness forbade his attendance. His cousin, though, Daniel Carroll, signed our National Law, which forever guarantees to Americans Civil, Religious and Personal Liberty. Carroll's manners were easy, affable and graceful; in all the elegancies of polite society few men were his superiors. His hospitality was nothing short of royal, and he was a lifetime user of light wines and barley brews. He died in his 95th year, the last survivor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and was looked upon with reverential regard by rich and poor alike. Fifty-eight years ago Anheuser-Busch launched their great institution, and have always brewed honest beers—the kind the illustrious Carroll loved to quaff. Day by day their famous brews have grown in popular favor until 7500 people are constantly employed to keep pace with the public demand. Their great brand —BUDWEISER—because of its quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor, exceeds the sale of all other beers by millions of bottles.

Danny Murphy Is Rewarded for Gameness

NEW YORK, May 31.—Danny Murphy, the old star of the Athletics, will be rewarded for his faithfulness to the Brookfeds' management by being retained on the club's roster until his contract has expired.

The Brookfeds recently released some of their waning stars to clubs in the Colonial League. Murphy is about through as a big leaguer and it occasioned surprise that he, too, wasn't let out. But the Brookfed management explains it thusly:

"Recently some of the players mutined against Manager Lee Magee. They wanted Murphy to be their leader, promising him their support for the managerial job in case Magee was ousted. But Murphy wouldn't join in. He played square with Magee. And now he gets his reward by remaining with the Brookfeds."

Scratching at Belmont Park Bad for Racing

NEW YORK, May 31.—Racing at Belmont Park will be dealt a crushing wallop if the management doesn't put a stop to the practice of scratching. During the past week so many horses have been scratched from the different races that there was little interest in the events.

One race, which had eight starters originally, simmered down to a two-horse affair. Another race was run with three starters.

The only explanation for the big amount of scratching is that the owners of so-called selling platers don't care to race their horses against heavy favorites, feeling that it is just a waste of effort.

However, they enter their horses for the races, the crowd notices the big number of entries, goes to the track in anticipation of seeing a good race and is bunked by seeing a two, three or four horse affair.

ANDOVER-EXETER IN TRACK MEET

ANDOVER, May 31.—Exeter and Andover, the great rival preparatory schools, battle in their annual track meet here today. Never have the two teams been so evenly matched on entering their dual meet, as they are this year, and the result of the meet is very likely to be in doubt until the last event on the program is run off.

Although Exeter has been greatly handicapped by the loss of several of its stars through illness and resignations, Coach Connors is confident that his team will come through against "Sid" Peet's charges.

Exeter was nosed out by Andover for first place in the recent Harvard Interscholastic meet, but the way the Red and Gray gathered in the points at the Yale interscholastic games at New Haven last Saturday shows what Connors has accomplished in a short time.

TEAMS WELL MATCHED.

Taking event for event, Exeter looks good in six, while Andover is conceded an advantage in a like number. Exeter's greatest strength has been shown in the century, the quarter, the half, the high jump, the pole vault and the shotput; while Andover has shown well in both hurdle events, the furlong, the mile, the broad jump and the hammer throw.

Clifford Rodman, who captured both hurdle events in the meet last Spring, is far better than Potter of Mann, Exeter's best timber-topper. "Hap" Phillips, who scored a double win in the dashes at both of the big interscholastic meets, should take the hundred from Gould of Andover without much difficulty, but in the furlong he is matched with a whirlwind in Captain Prescott.

STAR QUARTER MILERS.

Exeter has some stellar performers in the quarter and half. Bawden will run both of the events and will be supported in the quarter by Buchsbaum and Cobb and in the half by McDermott and Wakern. Likens of Andover will prove to be a hard man to down in the quarter, but Talmage and Wallace, Andover's best in the half, should prove easy for the Red and Gray trio.

EVERS TO TAKE TRIP WITH BRAVES

Johnny Evers is going to go on the Western trip with the Braves. The champions make their getaway Thursday night and start the tour in Cincinnati Saturday.

Evers does not expect to play a single game out West—in fact, the Keystone King is not counting upon getting back into the gray for another month. He wanted to pass up the trip and practice with the Red Sox morning and afternoon while his playmates were on the road. Following this program, Evers believes he would be in condition to play inside of a fortnight.

Stallings and Evers conferred today. The boss said he would rather have Johnny on the road with him, even if it would mean that he would be two weeks late in getting back in the game, than to make the rounds of the Western cities without his right bower. That settled the matter, and Evers will climb aboard the Pullman with the Braves when they pull out for Cincinnati Thursday night.

Dick Rudolph, who fell in a heap after rolling to Shortstop Bancroft of the Phillies at the start of the ninth inning of Saturday's game at Fenway Park, will probably be able to work in the New York series. Such was the happy announcement given out last night by Chief Stallings. Rudolph only gave a tendon high up in his left leg a slight twist, it appears. This will be good news to the fans, as it was generally feared that Rudolph had wrenched himself severely and would be a cripple for the next several weeks to come.

"There's nothing to worry about; Rudolph may even be back in his turn tomorrow," stated Stallings.

Johnson May Be Utilized in Outfield

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Walter Johnson in the outfield when he is not pitching. Well, why not?

Don't be at all surprised, fans, if Johnson plays many a game in one of the outer patches before the bell rings next October.

Howard Shanks appears to be off color in his batting this season, and Georgetown Tommy Connolly looks good only against right-handers.

When southpaws are in the points for rival clubs, Griff could go farther and do worse than substitute Walter Johnson, who, by the way, is not a poor fielder despite his vocation.

Against Pug Cavet on Tuesday Johnson banged out two clean singles, both of them vicious, hard drives. Walter did not have a chance in the field, but Griff is willing to make a little bet that the big fellow will handle nine chances out of ten. For three innings Tuesday he played left field. Neither of his hits figured in Washington's scoring, but one of these fine days he may be the man in a pinch.

Crews Are Ready for Poughkeepsie Races

NEW YORK, May 31.—Here are the positions that the various crews will have on the Hudson River for the Poughkeepsie regatta on June 28. The positions are numbered beginning from the shore and the highest numbered position, meaning nearest to the centre of the channel, is supposed to be the best:

Varsity Race—No. 1, Leland Stanford; No. 2, Columbia; No. 3, Pennsylvania; No. 4, Syracuse; No. 5, Cornell.

Junior varsity race—No. 1, Columbia; No. 2, Pennsylvania; No. 3, Cornell; No. 4, Syracuse.

Freshman race—No. 1, Syracuse; No. 2, Cornell; No. 3, Columbia; No. 4, Pennsylvania.

GOSPEL OF SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

What is the good of exercising?

The cave men, I suppose, had to be healthy and strong willy-nilly, otherwise they could not have fought with cave bears and run down ostriches; on the other hand, they had no French sauces, wines and tobacco, no auto cars, no clubs and fangoes, and were forced to live in the open for lack of houses. They had no theories of physical culture, and were also destitute of clothing wherewith to conceal the deformities which an idle life had such been possible for them—might inflict upon them.

The Greeks and Romans were surrounded by people who aimed to destroy them, and had to be strong and active in order to hold their own. The Goths and Vandals, who finally did destroy them, had added to their original cave-man condition, some of the devices and resources of their victims, and also outnumbered the latter ten to one.

The knights of the Middle Ages also had to be ready to fight at the drop of a helmet, and the weight of their armor acted as a constant gymnasium.

With all these good folks, therefore, exercise in the open, and the robust health that goes with it, was a matter not of virtuous choice but of rigid necessity; either that, or perish! They were hard as nails and healthy as wild asses, because they had to be that way in order to be at all.

But in these civilized times the quality, good or bad, of our physical condition is found to depend upon our moral resources, which, unfortunately do not seem always equal to shouldering the responsibility. The perils which we incur are not commonly such as muscular vigor would relieve us of, while a myriad temptations to indolence and indulgence beset us on every side. And when our stomachs protrude, our backs get crooked, our knees sag and our muscles get flabby, it is wonderful what a good tailor, or even that suit at ten dollars, will do to disguise it. Of our digestions I need not speak, and there are no tailors whose regenerative skill can handle that. Poor old Moral Resources is our only hope.

A moderate fraction of the community does, to be sure, cultivate its physique, from various motives. Some because there is fortune in it as well as glory, Mr. Willard for example; others because there is glory, like our college crews; and all those who have been bitten by the competition bug. And a few—very few—exercise because they know it is a good thing for them, and their moral resources have not suffered I-don't-feel-like-it to wait upon I-would.

It is my present purpose to increase the number of these admirable persons.

My argument will be based partly upon moral suasion, partly upon common sense, partly upon examples, and partly upon the instinct, which I believe still lingers in most of us, to do things which are worth while even when they are also difficult.

Now, we are off!

MAY BRIDES,

June brides and all brides will do well to choose their new homes from those advertised in the "Apartment to Let" columns of the Boston American.

LEONARD WOULD LIKE A TRADE

"Dutch" Leonard, star southpaw pitcher of the Red Sox, would welcome a chance to play for another club, and a trade would suit him.

"After reading what President Lannin had to say," declares Leonard, "I would just as soon go to some other club. I like Boston and I like the fans here and appreciate the way they treat a player even when he is getting beaten. But I must say that in the future I will not be any too anxious to take chances, fearing that if I was injured I would most likely be suspended.

"Of course, if I am kept here, I will go out and pitch as well as I know how, but a fellow certainly cannot have much desire to break his back, as I did last year, and then be called ungrateful. I have a sore arm and have had it examined by the best doctors in the country.

"Aside from this troublesome arm, I am in perfect physical condition.

"I hurt my arm pitching for the club, and now that it is sore all I have asked is that the club should stand by me, as I stood by last year when we were in the race. When I signed my present contract I asked to have the clause regarding disablement cut out, and it was at that time Mr. Lannin told me that I need never worry, and that he would see that I never wanted, no matter what happened, after the way I had pitched for him last year.

"As regards the $1,500 advance money, that was given to me right after I signed and was held up as an inducement for me to put my name to a two-year $5,000 contract, that is not at all enormous for a pitcher with a good record."

Star Marathon Men in Lawrence Race

Many of the best long distance runners will compete in the Bunting Marathon this afternoon at Lawrence. Mayor Kane of Lawrence will send the runners away. Edward Fabre, winner of the B. A. A. marathon, and Jimmy Henigan are the favorites.

The entries for the marathon include Emile Lefebvre, Montreal; John Barnby, Methuen; John F. O'Neill, Boston; Leo F. Flanagan, Lowell; William Brown, Quincy; William Salmon, Lowell; William J. Grover, Forge Village; Fred Couture, Lowell; Martin J. Silver, West Newton; Albert Ives, J. J. Callahan, Charles Horne and Arthur V. Roth of Dorchester.

New Records for Postponed Games

CHICAGO, May 31.—Rain and cold weather have caused 102 baseball games to be postponed in the National, American and Federal Leagues since the start of the season six weeks ago, according to figures compiled here. The figures set a record for major league postponements.

The Federal organization has suffered the heaviest, having forty-five games postponed. The National League had twenty-nine and the American twenty-eight. In Chicago the Federals have been obliged to postpone eight of the last sixteen scheduled games.

College Scribes in Title Ball Game

Teams representing the Harvard Crimson and the Yale News will meet on Soldiers Field this afternoon to decide the college scribes' championship. "Steamship" Hall and "Mankiller" Bishop is the announced Crimson battery, with "Frozen" Isham and "Stevens" Durgee working for Yale. Richard E. Connell, whose Harvard story on the Braves-Phillies game Saturday in the AMERICAN has been widely commented upon, is being sought to umpire the cataclysm.

GLOVER AND WELLS READY FOR BOUT

By JACK CONWAY

A BOUT for the world's welterweight championship may be held in Boston this year. There is no recognized boss of the welterweight class just now, but the management of the Atlas A. A. is planning to conduct a series of ring contests which will clear up the present muddle. It is possible to hold such a series of elimination battles at the Atlas A. A. as twelve-round decision affairs are allowed in this man's town.

The welterweight lid will be pried off at the Atlas tomorrow night, when Mike Glover of South Boston and Matt Wells, the English welterweight, clash in a twelve-round encounter. The tussle has aroused a great deal of interest and a large crowd is expected to turn out to witness the festivities.

There are few boxers who have a better right than Glover to put in a bid for the welterweight championship. Mike is only twenty-four years of age, and during his six years of ring service he has made a grand record.

GLOVER is a boxer of the old school. He knows the ring game from every angle, and is fast and shifty like Freddy Welsh. The South Boston favorite also packs a stinging punch in each hand and informs us that he will try and stop Wells if possible. Glover will not have to give any weight away to Wells, as both men have agreed to weigh in at 142 pounds at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

IT WILL be quite a novelty for Glover to meet a man of his own weight. Mike's ability as a boxer has caused the welterweights to refuse to meet him. He has been forced to fight middleweights and heavyweights in order to keep busy in the ring. He has clashed with such men as Battling Levinsky, Jack Dillon and Frank Klaus, but he has usually been able to more than hold his own. Glover engaged in two bouts with Jack Britton. He almost knocked Britton out in the first encounter, while he was outpointed by a slight margin in the second conflict.

WELLS recently arrived in this country from England. When England entered into the great European war, Wells wished to join his colors, but his "tin" ears had injured his hearing, and he was not accepted by the British army. When Wells was refused admission into the army, he went to one of the recruiting stations where he aided in drilling thousands of soldiers. He also taught many of them how to box. Soldier boxers are now appearing in matches at the National Sporting Club in London, and Wells says that it is almost impossible to beat them, as they are favored by the referees. In discussing boxing Wells said:

"If Freddie Welsh was to fight the soldier lightweight crack and the soldier stayed twenty rounds, they wouldn't hesitate a moment in turning over the title to him. That's how strong they are. I wasn't surprised to see Welsh win over Willie Ritchie, but I didn't expect him to win so easily. Ritchie didn't have one round in the twenty.

"BOMBARDIER WELLS and Frank Moran, the American, drew $25,000. Frank received $1,250 for his end. He was a 10 to 1 shot when he entered the ring, and after the first round he looked like a thousand to one. Wells boxed superbly and it looked as if he had come back into his own. Just when our hopes were flying highest his heart shrunk to a flaxseed and he quit. It is pretty hard to say that of my own countryman and a man of my own name, but these are the facts—he quit, and he quit cold.

"I regret to say that there are a lot of fake collections being taken up in England, which are supposed to be for the purchase of boxing gloves for our boys at the front. Thousands of dollars have been subscribed in this way, and thousands of poor devils out there in the trenches are still waiting for the gloves that will never come.

"The government is doing everything in its power to run down these petty thieves, and once they are nailed it is going to go mighty hard with them."

HARVARD AFTER REVENGE TODAY

Harvard and Brown clash again this afternoon, this time at Providence, when the nines play their second and final game of the season.

The Brunonians, with Saturday's game at Cambridge tucked away, will send Rube Cram after the Ramblers. Cram hasn't had much work this Spring, as Crowell has pitched twice a week and succeeded in winning nearly all his games. Cram is inclined to wildness, but will put on a few extra pounds of steadiness this afternoon in an effort to humble the Crimson.

Harvard's rearranged lineup of Saturday was a dismal failure, but Coach Haughton is expected to give it another trial today, except that Judd Beale may be played at short, as it is Mahan's turn for slab duty. Tack Hardwick is anxious to demonstrate that he can make good at third and will take another try at the hot corner today.

Mercantile League Opens Season Today

The schedule of the Mercantile Baseball League of Greater Boston will open this afternoon with four games.

The Bahigan Rubber Company nine will meet the Burditt and Williams players at Franklin Field in one of the openers. The other contests carded for today are Standard Speedometer and Boston Woven Hose, at Cambridge; Edison Electric and B. & A., at Edison Grounds, and the Western Electric and American Soda Fountain at McNary Park.

Wagers $100,000 to $1,000 on Golf Match

PHILADELPHIA, May 31.—Charles H. Geist, who paid $[illegible] for the construction of the Seaview Golf Club's links at Seaview, N. The game is to be played in the Fall after each has had time to practice.

DOUBLE BILL AT REVERE TRACK

HOLIDAY RACING AT REVERE.

(Afternoon).

Motor paced match—Leon Didier, Paris vs. Victor Linart, Antwerp.

15-Mile motor paced race—Harold Rollins vs. Frank Drobach vs. G. H. Boyd.

Special race for boys under fifteen years.

Amateur and professional events.

(Evening).

One-hour motor paced race—Leon Didier vs. George Wiley vs. Victor Linart vs. Vincent Madonna.

Amateur and professional events.

Undoubtedly one of the greatest double holiday bills ever offered at the Revere cycle track will be the one staged at the popular beach oval this afternoon and evening. Over three-score riders will take part in the dual card.

Two motor paced races, a special race for boys under fifteen years of age and the regular card of amateur and professional events will be run off in the afternoon, while at night there will be the first one-hour motor paced race of the season in addition to the amateur and professional contests. Judging by the calibre of the card it would not be in the least surprising if the attendance surpassed even that of April 19, when a record crowd packed into the beach enclosure.

The feature race of the matinee performance will be the motor paced match between Leon Didier and Victor Linart. This should be a sensational struggle, as both men are speed artists of the first water and have the wonderful endurance to carry them through. Didier showed that he is still there with those electrifying spurts, which earned him his laurels, when he defeated Linart and Wiley at the beach Saturday night.

Tonight Didier and Linart will be at it again, but this time will have George Wiley and Vincent Madonna as opponents in a one-hour motor-paced race. Wiley is peeved because of his defeat at the hands of the Frenchman Saturday evening and is anxious to make good this evening.

In addition to the big motor paced race in the afternoon there will also be a fifteen-mile contest behind the "chuggers," with Harold Rollins of Everett, Frank Drobach of South Boston and G. H. Boyd of Manchester, N. H., as starters.

Road Race Planned for Dorchester Day

The annual ten-mile road race in connection with the Dorchester Day celebration will be held on Saturday, June 5, at 4 p. m., starting from the locker building, Franklin Field, Mattapan. The race will be held under the auspices of the Park and Recreation Department of the city of Boston. It will be a handicap contest and is open to all registered amateurs. No entrance fee will be charged. Entries close on Friday, June 4, with M. J. McHale, No. 22 Hearn street, Boston.

DR. SARGENT turned somewhat impatiently, but on perceiving that Tommy belonged to the world of wealth and fashion, and was not a reporter, his manner changed to one of brusque courtesy.

"I've only just discovered," said Tommy, "that Celestia—I am not at liberty to tell you her real name (he wasn't for the simple reason that he didn't know what it was)—being held here until her friends can be discovered. I am one of her friends and I have come to take her away."

Dr. Sargent shook his head slightly, and said something in which Professor Stilliter's name occurred.

"Yes, I know," said Tommy, "but there is a great difference between being interested in a case and being interested in a person. Professor Stilliter is interested in her mental state. And I—well, I'm just interested in her."

"I have no authority to turn her over to you. Don't misunderstand me, but I don't even know who you are."

"I can't tell you who she is," said Tommy; "it wouldn't be right. But I'm Tommy Barclay, and I can really give very satisfactory references if I have to."

Dr. Sargent smiled now in a really friendly manner.

"You don't have to," he said. "I know you; I know Mr. Barclay very well indeed. And still, as long as Stilliter brought her here, and told me to keep her until he sent for her, I don't really see how I can let you take her away. Of course, I know she would be in good hands; why not wait until I can communicate with Stilliter?"

"I have no use for him," said Tommy, "any more than he has for me. If you let Celestia go with me he will probably be angry, and yet the rights of the matter are entirely on my side."

"I don't wish to be indiscreet, but is she a relative of yours?"

There was a good deal of Irish in Tommy's smile, and his eyes twinkled brightly as he said:

"Not yet."

"Not yet? I don't think I quite understand."

"Why," said Tommy, "it's very simple. I am engaged to her."

If he had been the most truthful young man in the world he might have said: "I am engaged to her, but she isn't engaged to me."

Still for a moment Dr. Sargent hesitated. Then he smiled and said: "After all, she is not under detention. She's as sane as I am except for the hallucinations about a heavenly origin, and if you want to take her away and if she wants to go with you I have no right to interfere. Just wait a moment, will you?"

In a few minutes he returned with Celestia. She had been very angry with Tommy because he had not come out of the water to rescue her from Stilliter, but the sight of him now dissipated all that remained of her wrath. She took two steps toward him, holding out both hands. And she exclaimed: "Oh, Tommy! I'm SO glad. You did come, didn't you?"

"Just as quickly as ever I could," said Tommy.

Dr. Sargent had drawn back smiling. "Lord," he thought, "what a handsome couple."

"I've got a taxi outside," said Tommy. "Can you be ready in a few minutes?"

"I'm ready now."

Tommy tries in vain to induce the hotel manager to take Celestia in.

Tommy lifted a long raincoat which he had brought with him from the arm of the chair in which he had been sitting.

"Will you put this on?" he asked. "I'm afraid New York isn't used to Greek clothes, and we don't want a crowd, do we?"

"No," said Celestia, "just us two."

She turned to the doctor and held out her hand.

"Thank you," she said, "for deciding that I'm not a lunatic."

Tommy put her into the taxicab and they drove up town; Celestia asking a hundred questions a minute about everything which interested her, and Tommy answering her questions as fast as he could and trying to decide what he had better do with her. Beyond getting her away from Stilliter, he had no very definite plans.

"Celestia," he said suddenly, "at first the doctor didn't want to give you up, and I'm afraid I told him a white lie." The young man blushed as he spoke. "I told him I was engaged to you, and, of course, he believes that you are engaged to me. And, of course, you aren't, unless you want to be."

"Are you engaged to me?" she exclaimed.

"Yes," said Tommy, "it happened suddenly, on the island. I'm engaged to you for always."

"Then you must love me."

"I do," said Tommy. "I do."

"You say you love me, and then you say you don't believe what I tell you."

"Meaning about heaven and all?" He asked this very humbly.

She nodded and said:

"I haven't really tried to make anybody believe but you. But I've looked at you hard, and willed you to believe, and you won't. I don't understand. Anybody else would."

"Did the doctors, Celestia?"

"I didn't try to make them. It isn't necessary yet. I must get a little used to the world, mustn't I, before I can help it?"

On any other point she seemed as rational as any other young girl who was seeing the great city of New York for the first time. But it began to look as if she would have to spend the rest of her life in the taxicab.

No hotel would take her in. Her clothes amounted to no more than an opaque nightgown with a raincoat thrown over it, and her bare feet caused almost as much excitement and distrust as her beauty. Tommy escorted her into two hotels in which only women guests are received. In each the manager flatly refused to admit her.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers, Ltd. Special rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

"THE best fellow in the world," said Crawley, and glanced furtively at Eva, but Eva did not apparently notice the remark. She was teasing the bulldog—Crawley adored that bulldog.

"You see what they've done to him, don't you?"

"Done to whom?" asked Crawley.

"To Mr. Brooke."

"No."

"But you haven't seen the papers?"

"I confess," answered Crawley, "that I only glanced most cursorily through the paper this morning."

CRAWLEY GIVES LADY WARREN A REBUKE

"And didn't you see that they've made your friend a K. C. M. G.? He's Sir Godfrey Brooke now."

"Good old Godfrey!" exclaimed Crawley delightedly. "I am so glad! If any man deserved an honor he did. I wonder he hasn't got it long before."

Lady Warren laughed.

"It seems to me," she said, "that it will soon be a distinction to be without a title. Who was Mr.—I mean, Sir Godfrey Brooke?"

Crawley winced. Whatever he was he was not a snob. He said:

"It seems to me, Lady Warren, that the question is not so much who he was as who he is. He was merely the son of a Canon of Ely."

"Oh, was he?" exclaimed Her Ladyship in awed tones. "I didn't know. So his father was a gentleman."

"A Canon, if that necessarily implies gentility. But now I suppose he is one of the most powerful men in the world, a financial giant; he has worked single handed toward the advancement of the British empire—done more to the cause of 'white man' than anybody I know.

"Personally," he added, a little apologetically, as he realized he was addressing a Furnival of Arunmore, "I consider an original title of far greater if not quite as picturesque value as an inherited one."

Lady Warren smiled whimsically. She was far too ignorant and far too good-natured to enter upon an argument. Titles meant nothing to her; they had lost their significance.

"That is just what Sir Squire says," she laughed. Sir Squire had been knighted ten years ago for services rendered to a great municipality on the occasion of a royal visit; his wife's family had been ennobled on Bosworth Field.

The news that Godfrey had received signal recognition from his King and government came as something of a shock to Crawley. However, he was pleased. He looked forward to seeing Brooke a Peer, and undoubtedly his anticipation would be realized in course of time.

So Zoe was now Lady Brooke. He breathed afresh and did not fear her momentarily expected entrance with nearly so much apprehension. After all, Zoe could not be completely oblivious of what this meant to her.

"As I was saying," Lady Warren went on, "we met the Brookes at dinner last night. Your friends took me down. We were with the Lancashires—charming house, isn't it? And the Duke is such a duck. Eva enjoyed herself immensely, even though you weren't there."

"That was a great shame!" conventionally exclaimed Crawley, addressing the girl, who had suddenly begun to take an interest in the conversation.

"We were talking of the Lancashire's party last night," explained Lady Warren, in answer to her daughter's look of inquiry. "I was telling Noel what a lovely time it was."

"Ripping," said the girl.

"And about that beautiful Mrs. Brooke, or Lady Brooke, as she is now, I suppose. I never quite know when the 'Mrs.' is supposed to end and the 'Lady' begins. However, never mind. Wasn't she just perfect?"

The girl started a little. Crawley gave her another look of swift and anxious inquiry, and was intensely relieved when she returned his look with a brave little smile that told him far more plainly than any words of her complete love and trust in him.

"Yes," she said, answering her mother, "she is certainly very beautiful, but there is something about her face that I do not quite like. I do not think she can be a very kind woman."

Crawly winced.

AN ODD ESTIMATE OF LADY BROOKE.

"She seems very much wrapped up in her husband," said Lady Warren, "a little bit too much, perhaps. One can overdo that sort of thing, you know. Yes, I quite agree with you, Eva dear, she does look a bit of a tartar. I don't think I should like to offend her. But it is a shame to discuss your friends like this, Noel, behind their backs. But then you know what we women are, don't you?"

As a matter of fact, Crawley was asking himself whether he was glad or sorry that he would be relieved of the responsibility of effecting an introduction between the two women; also he was getting very nervous as to the result, in any case. Zoe would be here at any moment, and he felt that he ought to say something at once to prepare Lady Warren and her daughter for her visit. Especially as they were talking of her; there was no excuse for silence.

If only Lady Warren could be persuaded to talk of something else. Crawley tried to change the topic of conversation several times, but without success.

"Talking of this Brooke woman," Lady Warren chattered on. But she did not get any further, for the door was flung open, and Hutton, acting on his master's instructions, announced grandiloquently:

"Mrs. Brooke!"

The whole thing passed off splendidly, despite Crawley's apprehensions. Mrs. Brooke, or as she was now, Lady Brooke—did not betray by so much as a quiver of an eyelid her surprise and disappointment at seeing Crawley's visitors.

She shook hands most naturally with the artist, and said he was looking remarkably well, and that she hoped she was not in the way—for a glance at Lady Warren and her daughter told her that Crawley had not prepared them for her visit.

She was passing, she said, and she thought she would just run up and say how-do-you-do, especially as she had a commission she wanted to discuss with him. Then she shook hands cordially with both Lady Warren and Eva, and affectionately embraced Bully, who was always peculiarly fond of strangers who took notice of him.

"I'm just dying for a cup of tea," she said, sinking into one of those deep-seated chairs of Crawley's. "Do go on playing, Miss Warren. What is it—eh? Oh, 'The Little Twin Dukes!' Have you seen it? Awfully good, I hear! Godfrey—that's my husband, you know—is taking me on Thursday, I think. I feel out of everything; we've been away so long."

"But we really mustn't leave the poor man out in the cold any longer!" exclaimed Lady Brooke, with the sublime assurance of the married woman of the world. "Come, Mr. Crawley, let me help myself to some tea."

When a kettle lid has lost the knob push a cork half through the little hole and secure it by driving a nail horizontally on the under side. It will last a long time, and save burning the fingers.

When cleaning plate and silver apply paste or liquid polish with a small paint brush, leave the article to become dry, then polish with a leather. This will save time and trouble.

To make smelling salts procure an ounce of rock volatile and break it into small pieces. Put it into the bottle, and then cover it with eau-de-cologne. Let it stand for a few days, and it is ready for use.

ELAINE ESCAPES NEW DISASTERS

ELAINE, conceiving a fancy to motor to a friend's country house in New Jersey, obeyed the caprice. She is dragged off to an opium smugglers' den in the woods, where she was met by Wu Fang. The man of the serpent mind ordered that she be taken aboard the opium smuggling schooner.

"That Heaven," she breathed, "I have brought with me Craig's gift, the wireless telephone."

Ashore, after they had found and captured the opium smugglers' den and taken the guarding Chinamen prisoners, Craig Kennedy was startled by a message by wireless telephone, apprising him of his sweetheart's danger.

He put off at once in a revenue cutter.

As the searchlight cast its broad beam upon them the girl sprang into the water. The Chinaman sprang after her. Hand over hand he churned the water in pursuit of her. The pursuers could see the gleam of a knife in one of the upraised hands of the powerful swimmer.

Craig Kennedy turned the rapid-fire gun upon the swimming would-be assassin.

"Elaine, My Moving Picture Queen," is the title of a delightful new song just put on the market. Already it is being sung all over the country. It is dedicated to Miss Pearl White, and bears her autographed photograph in colors. The song is a rollicking one-step, and is generally conceded to be one of the season's hits. It may be purchased at any music store, or a copy will be mailed postpaid by sending six two-cent stamps to the Star Company, P. O. Box 1749, New York City.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE;
OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

The Supreme Tribute Our Soldier Dead Deserve

TO the thoughtful American this Memorial day brings reflections that are at once the sources of swelling pride and of profound and anxious concern.

Amid the din and uproar of this gigantic war he will perceive that no rectitude of purpose or of conduct can insure a nation against the trial of battle and the supreme arbitrament of arms. And while his heart beats high as he recalls the determination and the valor which animated his countrymen, whether they wore the blue or wore the gray, he will not fail to reflect that in everything except that same courage we are utterly unprepared to meet the sudden, vast and terrible onset of foes who may storm upon the land at any unexpected provocation.

Fifty and four years ago the nation went to war, and the only reason that the federal capital was not seized, the chief federal cities captured, the federal troops dispersed and the fabric of the federal union wrecked in a few short and terribly decisive weeks, was the simple reason that the assailants of the union were no more prepared to make war upon it than were the defenders of the union to make war in its defence.

Had either of the warring sections possessed a trained military force no larger than that which is now maintained by states as small as Switzerland or Holland, the Civil War would have ended within the ninety days for which the volunteers were first mistakenly called to the colors.

That lesson every American citizen should take deeply to heart.

That lesson every American statesman should use as a lamp to his feet.

That lesson every American administration should bind as a token upon his hand and as frontlets between its eyes for a memorial forever.

We hear constantly loose talk about the ingenuity and resourcefulness of our people—how they have always met the emergency of war by forging swift preparation upon the anvil of the moment; and as it were in the twinkling of an eye.

That is the talk of invincible ignorance which is neither able to perceive facts nor to reason with sound conclusions.

The truth is that the armies which met at Bull Run were nothing more than armed mobs—brave, intelligent, the best raw material out of which to make the best armies that the world has ever seen, but still undisciplined mobs.

The further truth is that it was not until the second year of the Civil War that armies of the North or of the South had attained soldierly efficiency or would have been a match in the field for anything like the same number of trained and fairly good troops led by skilful commanders.

Undoubtedly these soldiers did finally develop the highest qualities ever displayed in the camp, on the march or on the field of battle.

There never was and it is not likely that there ever will be an equal number of men who could have faced either the veterans of Grant or the veterans of Lee with any hope of victory—after those men had become veterans.

There never was such an intelligent soldiery. Not without reason were they finely and most fittingly designated as "The thinking bayonets," and he who would know the proofs of their indomitable courage needs but to read the gallant story of their combats—of the valor that stormed up the impregnable heights of Fredericksburg; of the valor that charged across the steppes of Gettysburg and went down in red heaps before the guns of Doubleday; of the valor that charged and of the valor that held so fast on so many forever famous fields of desperate fight. At the close of our great war this nation could have faced the whole world in hostile arms, and met the tremendous shock with superb confidence in the strength of its fleets, and the skill and capacity of its captains and the resolution and courage of its citizen soldiery.

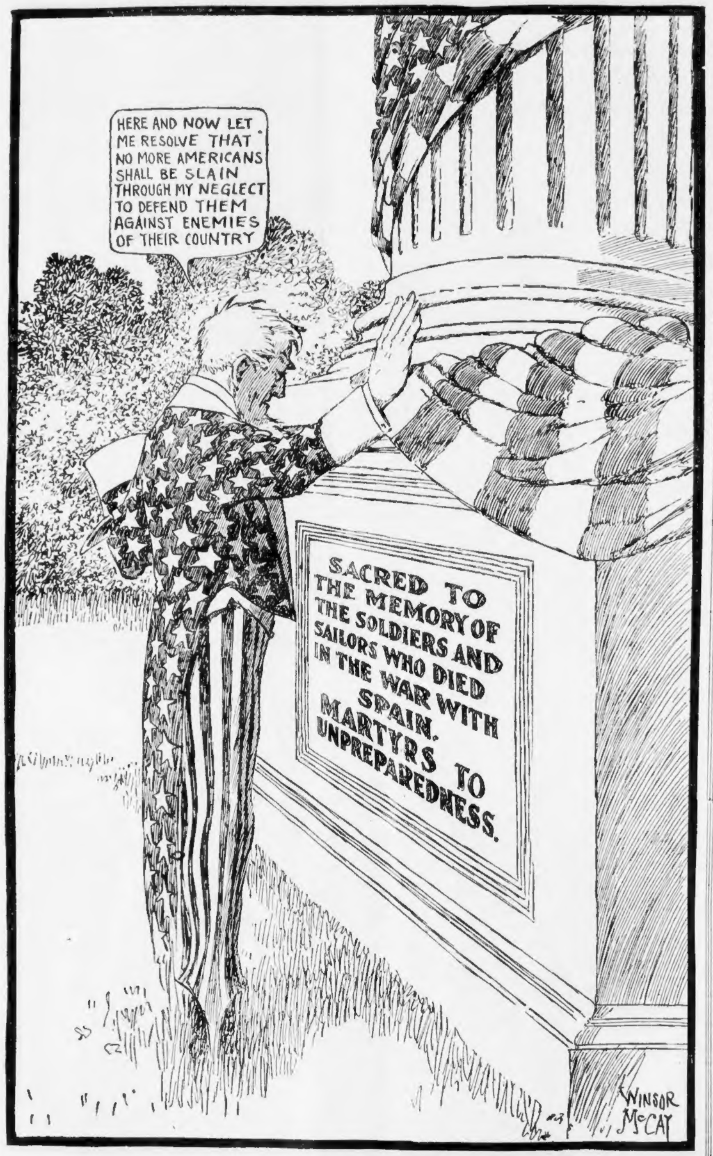
* * * *

TODAY we shall all fare forth to heap upon the graves of the dead who died in that war the bright memorials of the flowering Spring.

Above their dust eulogy will speak of their heroism and their sacrifices, and patriotism will proudly recite the renown, the riches and the might of the republic they decided to keep forever united. Our hearts will swell within, as indeed, they should swell, with happy pride in the martial story of the deeds of these dead.

A RESOLUTION FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.



HERE AND NOW LET ME RESOLVE THAT NO MORE AMERICANS SHALL BE SLAIN THROUGH MY NEGLECT TO DEFEND THEM AGAINST ENEMIES OF THEIR COUNTRY
SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF THE SOLDIERS AND SAILORS WHO DIED IN THE WAR WITH SPAIN. MARTYRS TO UNPREPAREDNESS.
WINSOR McCAY

The father will recite to the little sons the actions of his kindred, how those of his own self-same clan and blood marched and fought, how this one was wounded, how this one died in the sad hospitals, how this one fell in the whirlwind of the charge and his soul went up to God on the winds of the battle cheers.

The good mother will tell to her little daughters how her mother buckled the sword on husband and son and sent them forth to fight for their President and their country with a brave courage in her eyes and a tempest of tears in her anguished heart.

And down the city's crowded streets and along the quiet country roads, wending their ways to the cemeteries where sleep the soldiers, ten thousand flower-laden processions will march beneath the streaming flags and amid the crashing music of brass and drums.

Such is the tribute the nation will pay to those careful merchants of their lives, who sold them for the safety and perpetuation of the republic and to the everlasting profit of themselves, of their children and of the ages.

It is a noble tribute, a wonderful, a beautiful tribute. But, citizens, IT IS NOT ALL THE TRIBUTE THE DEAD DESERVE, FOR THEY DESERVE THAT THE NATION THEY SO WILLINGLY AND SO GLORIOUSLY DIED TO MAINTAIN SHOULD BE FOREVER GUARDED WITH THE VIGILANT FORESIGHT AND THE INVINCIBLE PREPARATION WHICH ALONE CAN ASSURE THE PRESERVATION OF THAT NATIONAL EXISTENCE FOR WHICH THEY MADE THE LAST SUPREME SACRIFICE,

The patriotism, citizens, which strews flowers on our dead soldiers and refuses dollars to keep safe and secure the land for whose safety and security those soldiers died, is a poor patriotism, a weak patriotism, a shoddy patriotism.

The spirit which spends itself in eulogies of deceased valor and will not make the poor, cheap sacrifices of mere money to keep sweet and everlastingly alive the dear-bought fruits of that deceased valor, is a mean spirit, which avoids its just debts of gratitude and shirks the solemn obligation the dead can lay upon the living.

Let us take these truths to our hearts, citizens, while we stand again at the graves of our soldier dead.

Let us again, as the great President so nobly said, here highly resolve that the dead shall not have died in vain.

Let us fix it in our hearts with determined resolve that from this day on there shall never be another hour when preparation for the defence of the land shall not go steadily on; that the nation shall be safeguarded as it was when these brave men safeguarded it; that both the oceans shall swim our mighty fleets; that our flag shall go where it lists with honor and respect; and that, with rightoueness in our hearts and the preponderant guns of our battleships to speak our authority and invincibility, we will defend and maintain forever the liberties, the institutions, the rights and the dominion which these dead gloriously died to defend and to maintain.

God save the Republic!

And let all the people say, Amen!

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

Luck

CALEB M'COY, when he sought for a wife,
Didn't fall for the bonnie blue eyes;
He wanted a partner to gladden his life
Who was handy at biscuits and pies.
So he picked out a maiden whose years had been spent
With a dishpan and dustcloth and broom,
And calmly looked forward to peace and content
Till the time came to order his tomb.

MORTIMER MIX, who was strong for romance
And was charmed by the lure of a curl,
Was swept off his feet at a country club dance
And wedded a fox-trotting girl—
A dream as to grace and a peach as to looks,
Whose throat was like ocean-tossed foam.
But who never had bothered with cookery books
And was glad there was no place like home.

BUT the lady who mated with Caleb McCoy
Was weary of saucepan and range,
And after the wedding she welcomed with joy
The earliest chance for a change.
She learned the new dances and tried the new drinks,
She picked up each popular craze,
Till Caleb, appalled by her nightly high jinks,
Wept aloud for his bachelor days.

WHILE the new Mrs. Mix, being worn to a shred
By the gait of the sinuous fox,
Was glad to be baking her Mortimer's bread
And darning her Mortimer's socks.
She tended the babies that gathered around
As the prosperous years rolled along.
And the care free and fortunate Mortimer found
That life was one glad, grand, sweet song.

ALL of which shows you that love is a lottery,
The one biggest guess in the game we call life!
The girl whose delight is the gay gilded trottery,
May prove—for all you know—an excellent wife.
While the kitchen-bent drudge—such is woman's duplicity—
May discard her fondness for soap, yeast and starch,
And all of her yearning for sweet domesticity,
With the last fading note of the "Lohengrin" March.
